Message from the Mayor

It is with pride that the Town of Pincourt presents its 6th Action Plan regarding People with Disabilities, developed in collaboration with the Office des personnes handicapées du Québec (OPHQ). This new exercise is part of our continued commitment to enhancing inclusivity and accessibility within Pincourt.

Aiming to provide a clear picture of the obstacles experienced by people with disabilities and to propose tangible solutions, the Town focused on listening, collaboration, and citizen participation at every stage of the plan's development.

This process mobilized all municipal services, including urban planning, social and cultural development, as well as administration. Together, our goal is to reduce barriers, facilitate access to our buildings and activities, and improve daily use of our equipment.

I invite you to review this action plan, which presents concrete and achievable measures, and to join us in this collective effort to make our town an even more welcoming place for everyone.

As a municipality with over 15,000 inhabitants, the Town of Pincourt must adopt and update annually an action plan for people with disabilities, as stipulated in section 61.1 of the Act to secure handicapped persons in the exercise of their rights with a view to achieving social, school and workplace integration.

Definitions and concepts

Universal accessibility

Universal accessibility is defined as “the characteristic of a product, process, service, information, or environment which, with an aim for equity and an inclusive approach, enables any person to carry out activities independently and to obtain equivalent results”¹.

By applying the principles of universal accessibility, the necessary conditions are put in place to allow all individuals to function independently. Universal accessibility fosters social inclusion and improves living conditions for all citizens, whether or not they have a disability.

Disability or handicap?

Disability

A disability refers to a person’s abilities, meaning how they function. It is a reduction in a person’s capacity to perform an activity or to function intellectually, psychologically, physiologically, or anatomically².

Handicap

A handicap results from the interaction between a person’s disabilities, their activities, and their environment³.

Thus, a person with a disability finds themselves in a handicapping situation if their environment does not allow them to function optimally. By applying the principles of universal accessibility, obstacles encountered by people with disabilities are reduced, which allows them to function independently and not find themselves in a handicapping situation.

Person with a disability

A person with a disability is someone with a significant and persistent impairment. The disability may be motor, visual, auditory, intellectual or related to speech, language, other senses, organ function, autism spectrum disorder, or severe mental health issues. Due to their disability, a person with a disability is more likely to face obstacles in daily life.

Person in a handicapping situation

A person is in a handicapping situation when they have a disability, which may be mild or temporary, and find themselves in a non-adapted environment that limits their daily functioning.

2025-2026-2027 Action Plan regarding People with Disabilities

APPROACH

Consultation with people with disabilities and their representatives

To develop this action plan, we consulted citizens and organizations providing services to people with disabilities using an online survey, focus groups, and individual meetings.

These steps allowed us to ensure good representation of each type of disability, as well as to gather opinions from adults with disabilities, caregivers, and parents of children with special needs.

We would like to thank all the organizations and citizens who participated in our consultations, making it possible to identify obstacles and measures tailored to our territory and to the needs of our citizens.

A consultation committee was also formed and will be involved for annual updates to the action plan, to ensure its coherence and evolution in connection with the community's reality.
